LOCATION DELIGHTFUL. Social and moral influences elevating. Thorough scholarship and Christian manliness the primary objects. Expenses the lowest. Standard of instruction high. Large additions have been made to the grounds, buildings and furniture. The institution rests upon a solid financial foundation. There was an increase of 50 per cent. in attendance last year. Two hundred bright young men are expected this year. The quality and quantity of instruction have been greatly improved. Every college recreation this year will be a heartening regular professor, not one by a tutor. The college was never before in such a position with a single exception. The Academy offers a choice English course to those who do not wish to study Latin and Greek. It also presents a three years' preparatory course, which will fit young men to enter any college, East or West, without conditions. The college opens two courses, the scientific and the classical. In these the institution now stands unrivaled by any other college in Illinois.

LINCOLN'S ASSASSIN.

How Carefully Booth Posed in His Last Appearance in Tragedy.

George Alfred Townsend.

"I had never been able to see the play called 'The American Cousin,'" said George Alfred Townsend, "although I had several times had engagements to go and see it and I had never yet seen it fully performed, so that I have a sort of superstition about the piece. The night that Mr. Lincoln was murdered I observed that 'The American Cousin' was to be played, and I took my sister, who is now deceased, and another lady to the theatre. We had seats far down the front, only a few steps from the stage. Mr. Lincoln came in and proceeded to his box, which was the upper one on the right, but he was not visible to the audience where he sat, having a place back in the box, from which he could the better see the stage. Indeed, from where I sat below, I could see no person in the boxes. Not long before Mr. Lincoln was shot there was a change of scenes, during an act, and it seemed to me that it was the longest time required to change scenes that I had ever observed in a theatre. It was so noticeably long that I afterward wondered in connection with the murder if there might not have been some irresolution or perplexity on that stage. Not long after there was a sound somewhat like the slapping of your hands together, sharp, yet not very loud, but loud enough to make me turn my head and wonder what could have made it, and whether it was a pistol, and I reflected that I had never heard of a pistol being fired during 'The American Cousin.'"

"The next morning I saw was Booth getting out of that box. I had seen Booth play on two occasions, and knew his face perfectly well. There never was a more deliberate thing than his stepping out on the all of that box and stepping from it. He made as pretty a jump as I ever saw. If he had practiced that leap it could hardly have been more elegant. He alighted in a crouching position, like one who had brought his body down to break the shock of a fall. While it was a good jump in height, it was not a dangerous one at all, perhaps from where he leaped to the stage nine or twelve feet. His spur tore a flag, and that seemed to bring him around somehow so that he alighted with his face turned more to the audience than would have been the case had he merely hopped directly downward. His face was marble pale. In his right hand he held a knife, and in a theatrical way he stretched it upward and distinctly said the words: 'Sic semper tyrannis!' Then in a very stately stride, still pale, serious and intense, he went right across the stage and out. Many people at this stood up, and near me was a naval officer whose name I still remember, who, hearing some one exclaim: 'The president has been shot,' lifted himself, sailor fashion, up the wood-work and decorations of the private box below and climbed into the box above, and he came down the same way in the audience, and he had upon his hand a little piece of the brain of Mr. Lincoln, with blood attached, which he said he was going to keep. 'Of course the audience was dumfounded, and I was going up the street a few minutes after the performance, to find in the next morning said to me: 'This is terrible news. Mr. Stanton and here I forgot the officer mentioned by General Hamilton Mr. Seward, we fear, have been mortally wounded.' At this I went immediately to my office and took the responsibility, as chief of staff of the artillery, of ordering out the field batteries we had in the forts around Washington. I feared the next thing would be some kind of rebel rising in Washington, and summoned the artillery to come down at once, and had them put in positions to fire upon the town and clear the main avenues if there was to be any more violence."

What Constitutes an "Intelligent Composer."

It may interest the public to know what are the principle qualifications required of those printers that work in first-class city newspaper offices. Although every compositor is supposed to have a good copy, and does not and cannot always do so. No matter how faulty the grammar, the punctuation, the spelling, the capitalization of the writer for the press may be, the compositor is expected to make it all right when he sets the type. The compositor is the best friend of the editor, the journal on which he is engaged as type-setter. The compositor is the best friend of the publisher. If there be given to the compositor a piece of manuscript copy in which occur the most unfamiliar foreign words, and phrases, and in which there are written neither capital letters nor punctuation marks, he is usually thought to be a compositor of the first order. He is expected to know where he has erred, he is generally compelled to correct such mistakes or mistakes at the expense of his own time. Many have been the serious errors which I myself have corrected for writers, errors which would have probably gone uncorrected had it not been for my action. The compositor is a mechanic, and his labor is largely mechanical, but his work is largely mental. He toils with his brain as well as with his hands. He performs much gratuitous labor—does many things for which he receives little credit. Oftentimes the writer greatly annoys the compositor by writing to write proper names and technical terms plain. As the compositor almost invariably works "by the piece," i. e., at a stated price per 1,000 "ems," great loss is entailed upon him when he corrects errors which the writer has made it necessary to be corrected. Finally, the compositor is expected to be a walking encyclopedia, a philologist, and a decipherer of genuine hieroglyphs.

Tunnels, Not Bridges, in the Future.

"There will never be another suspension bridge built over the East river," said an engineer who has been a great interest in the undertaking. "Why not?" he was asked. "Will not the rapid development of the two cities require more?" "But the development of science is more rapid still. I have known a man in 1879 as we do now the bridge would never have been built; we should have tunneled. And the completion and operation of the Hudson River tunnel will give encouragement to other like enterprises. Mr. Corbin of the Long Island railroad company, seriously contemplated one under the East River at South Ferry, and the scheme is temporarily abandoned only while he is engaged in capturing the bridge and the elevated railroad system of Brooklyn as part of his scheme."

A Jury's "Jujumat."

Red Dog, Arizona, getting divided. A corner was appointed last month, and next morning he impounded a jury to view the most recent corpse. The following was the verdict: "We, the jury, duly sworn, find that deceased was killed by Jujumat of God for having killed Bill-Jaxon a liar."

A POEM BY A POPULAR ACTRESS.

[Helena Modjeska.]

Upon a mountain's height, far from the sea, I found a shell, And to my curious ear this lonely thing Ever a song of ocean seemed to sing— Ever a tale of ocean seemed to tell.

How came this shell upon the mountain's height? Ah, who can say Whether there dropped by some too careless hand— Whether there cast when oceans swept the land— Ere the Eternal had ordained the day?

Strange, was it not, far from its native sea, One song it sang— Song of the mighty mysteries of the tide— Song of the awful vast, profound and wide— Softly with echoes of the ocean rung.

And, as the shell upon the mountain's height Sings of the sea, So do I over, leagues and leagues away— So do I over, wondering where I may, Sing, O my home—sing, O my home, of thee.

FOOLING WITH AN OLD MAN.

A Case in which an Apology and Explanation Failed to Work Just Right.

The Judge. Slimkins, Jones junior, and several other young fellows were standing on the corner waiting for a street car. They had had a drink or two, and were just feeling jolly and ripe for any kind of mischief. Presently Jones noticed a portly and very dignified looking old gentleman standing just across the street, evidently waiting for the same car they intended to take. "Tell you what, Slimkins," said Jones, "wouldn't it be a good joke to go behind that old fellow and give him a slap on the back? It would wake him, he looks as if he needed it—and do him good generally if it didn't make him swallow his false teeth."

"Good idea," said Slimkins, to whom the practical joke really seemed gigantic; "it's easy to apologize for the mistake afterwards, and the fun remains." So he crossed the street very gently, and approaching the unsuspecting old gentleman, very cautiously, discharged a slap like a forty-eight pounder straight between the shoulders.

"Oh, what's that?" gasped the victim when he had recovered from the shock and his breath, glaring indignantly at Slimkins, and looking ready to annihilate him. "What the devil do you mean by assaulting me in that raffish manner?"

"I really beg your pardon, sir," said the (apparently) contrite Slimkins. "Shouldn't have taken such a liberty for the world, only I thought you my uncle from the country, whom I haven't seen for years."

"Gamp!" grunted the old gentleman, "shouldn't think your uncle from the country would ever want to see you again if that's the way you treat him."

"I'm very sorry, sir," said Slimkins. "It can't be helped, I suppose," said the aggrieved party; "accidents will happen; but if you'll take my advice you'll be more careful in future, young man."

The delighted Slimkins rejoined his party, and the joke was enjoyed hugely all round. Just then Tompkins, who had seen nothing of the foregoing episode, arrived on the scene, and was forth with hailed by the incorrigible Jones.

"Did you drink for the crowd, you don't go up and slap that old gentleman on the back, and claim him for your uncle."

"Why not?" said Tompkins; "bet you the round I walk up and slap him and apologize; and, what's more, get away with it. I've done the same thing scores of times."

"Well, let's see you now," said Slimkins. "Drinks goes," queried Tompkins, preparing to start.

"Drinks goes," assented Jones. And the unsuspecting Tompkins walked to his doom. The slap which he discharged between the old gentleman's shoulders, nearly paralyzed that venerable party, and Tompkins had seized the opportunity offered by his disorientation to retreat, all right, but he was well. But he lingered to apologize.

"I really beg your pardon, sir; I thought you were my uncle from the country," said he, soothingly. "But the words were so close out of his mouth before he knew what he was saying, that he couldn't help it. I'm sure he meant to apologize, and I'm sure he meant to apologize."

"In that event you'll have to pay letter postage," said Jones.

"I say you'll have to pay about three cents on every paper, instead of two cents a pound."

"An' dat's de tax dat de gubernment putson a first-class paper, huh? De president, I spects, is puttin' willin' ter hab de country hold up second-class papers, 'kernin' ter hold de smart men down, see, $1.10 fur de country, sah, an' I ain't agwine ter submit ter no sich a rule!" "I see agwine ter run a first-class paper, sah; de gubernment can't hab de first-class paper ter de edit an' de write on a rule, dat's what I s'agwine ter do."

Merchant-Traveler. Col. Gressom was a bright-tongued southerner, who held his "honorary" a premium, but was a poor business manager, and he broke up. He had trouble with one of his creditors, and a fight was imminent. One day a gentleman met him and inquired:

"Colonel, do you settle with that mud-sill?" "Yes, sah, I did, sah. My honah was at stake, sah."

"Ah, I'm exceedingly glad to hear you fixed him and came out in such good shape. How did you settle? According to the code?" "Yes, sah," replied the colonel, dropping his pompous air on the ground as it were, and stepping on it, "not exactly."

"I settled with him at ten cents on the dollar, and he was d— glad to get it."

Probably Good to Have Them. Editorial Cor. Peck's Nod. I have often wondered what the loaders around a country depot did when the daily train was gone. I suppose one goes to a livery stable and sits on an upturned half bushel and spits at a knot hole in the floor, another goes to the store and sits on a dry goods box and smokes a pipe, and a third goes to a saloon and sits on a stool and smokes a cigar.

A MAN FROM DECATUR.

Crookedness in Chicago—A Statement full of Mistakes.

In the Chicago Inter-Ocean of yesterday appeared the following paragraph of local news:

A MAN OF DECATUR—HIS WIFE SAVES HIM FROM WALKER.

A well-known citizen of Decatur, Ill., came to Chicago about ten days ago to attend the races. Being so far away from home he went in for a good time and went on a glorious drunk. Through betting on the wrong horses and fast living combined, he soon squandered all the money he had with him, between $1,500 and $2,000, and felt the need of more. To raise the wind he raised the sum of $500 on three checks, one for $200, one for $200, and the third for $100. The checks were found to be forgeries, and the matter was placed in the hands of a detective agency. The chief of police was notified by telegram to arrest the forger, and he would have been in the meshes of the law but for one little circumstance. The chief is a married man, and naturally enough he mentioned the case to his better half. The latter happened to be an intimate friend of the wife of the citizen whose apprehension was desired. She went at once to her friend and told her the story. The wife of the citizen was equal to the emergency, for she at once raised what money she could and took the next train for Chicago. She visited the parties who had cashed the checks and discharged their claim in full. She also paid all the expenses incurred in working up the case, and destroying the checks, returned to her home. Her husband by this time had sobered up, and realized, no doubt, how narrowly he had escaped being put through the efforts of his faithful wife.

The above statement does Marshal Mason great injustice, because it is a fact that Mrs. Mason is not acquainted with the wife of the accused and never spoke to her, and besides she had no knowledge whatever of the inquiries sent here from Chicago by telegraph and mail about the Decatur man, and knows nothing of it up to this writing.

Briefly told, the following are the facts in the case so far as the Decatur officers are concerned and they have all the correspondence with regard to the matter which has been seen by the REPUBLICAN reporter. Detective George A. Hartman, of Chicago, had charge of the case in that city. First he sent a telegram to Marshal Mason asking if the Decatur man wanted was then in Decatur. He was not and Mason replied immediately to that effect on the evening of July 11th, when the dispatch was received. At no time during the correspondence did Mason receive an order to arrest the party, only an expressed desire to keep posted as to the whereabouts of the crooked citizen, who it appears was in Chicago up to Thursday evening, July 12th, when he left that city for Decatur arriving here Friday morning. He was met at the depot by J. S. Hewes, Captain of the night police, and was kept under police surveillance until Sunday morning when information came from Chicago that the whole matter had been settled.

Marshal Mason and Captain Hewes were the only persons in Decatur who were acquainted with the crookedness of the citizen in Chicago, and they acted together in giving Detective Hartman all the information he desired. Saturday the following telegram was received:

CHICAGO, ILL., July 14. To Marshal Mason, Decatur: Matter settled. Do nothing further. Letter by night mail.

G. A. HARTMAN, Detective. The following is a portion of the letter referred to which arrived Sunday morning:

CHICAGO, ILL., July 14. W. W. MASON, Chief of Police, Decatur, Ill.:—Dear Sir, I am under a great many obligations and return to you my sincere thanks in the case of "X." Should you ever have occasion for any information in this city, we would be pleased at any time to reciprocate. Respectfully yours, GEO. A. HARTMAN, Detective.

WHOSE ARE THEY? Officer Condon has in his possession a sound set of upper false teeth, which were found on the levee the other evening. The owner can have the ershers by calling on the officer named. These are teeth-pulling times and the places are valuable.

A STATE CASE. Yesterday Bob Winston, colored, and Ashbury Childers, living on West Decatur street, engaged in a wordy warfare, during which it is alleged that Childers made an assault on Winston with an old army musket with intent to do bodily injury. Bob swore out a state warrant for the arrest of Childers and this morning Officer Hartley took the accused into custody. The examination was commenced in Justice Lowry's court at 10 o'clock this forenoon. The attorney for the prosecution was I. D. Walker, and Harvey Pascoe appeared for the defendant. All the parties directly interested and the cloud of witnesses live in the same neighborhood.

The case was still on trial at 3 o'clock.

THE Rev. Dr. R. D. Harper, of Philadelphia, who arrived in the city last evening, will occupy the pulpit at the First M. E. church on Sunday morning next. He is an able preacher. The Harrison revival hymns will be used. All having copies of the same should take them to church Sunday morning.

A Sunday School Picnic. The members of the Sabbath School connected with St. John's Episcopal Church spent yesterday at the fair grounds. They went out early in the forenoon in a special car on the Wabash road, and returned at 5 o'clock in the evening in the same manner. All participants say they had a happy time.

AFTER Big Money. Attorney I. D. Walker is in receipt of a business letter from Ex-Mayor Waggoner who is now in Europe. It is part of Mr. Waggoner's business in the old country to look up affairs in an estate valued at over $60,000, in which several American people are interested as heirs. Mr. W. writes that in all probability the shares would be secured for Dr. Faris of Natick, and a claimant in Pennsylvania. The estate was owned by a wealthy Scotchman who died over half a century ago.

THE Difference. The Christian church of Lincoln have engaged as pastor Elder S. H. Bundy, of Metropolis, Ill., who will begin his work on the 1st of August. The Elder is a physician, and gave up a good practice to enter the ministry, though it is not to be supposed that he did so because it is easier to preach than to practice. The action of a former Decatur pastor was just the opposite. Rev. Roberts stepped down and out of the Baptist pulpit to fit himself for the practice of medicine.

GAZZA UNDERSHIRT, at Stine's. June 27—d&wt

A company of friends spent yesterday very delightfully at the inviting home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Phillips, on West William street. It was a lawn basket dinner party, and it proved so enjoyable that the company remained for tea and separated reluctantly soon after 8 o'clock in the evening. The afternoon was given up to participating in a variety of lawn and parlor games in which all engaged. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. P. Loeb, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Antrim, Miss Anna Cox, Miss Ella Antrim, Miss Alla Lewis, Mr. E. W. Shively, Mr. and Mrs. S. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Swearingen, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Hamsher. One of the incidents of the occasion worthy of special mention was a surprise planned by Mr. E. W. Shively, the photo artist, of the Tower Gallery. He got the company together in a group and secured a splendid negative of the party, copies of which will be preserved as mementoes of the happy day the friends spent with Mr. and Mrs. Phillips.

THE GEN. MOORE MEMORIAL.

Postponed until the Afternoon of Thursday, July 26th.

To be Held at Imboden's Springs.

The time of holding the public exercises in memory of the late Gen. Jesse H. Moore, has been postponed from Sunday next to Thursday, July 26th, at 3 p. m., at which time they will be held at Imboden's Springs. The postponement was made in deference to the wishes of the relatives residing here, who desire the presence of several clergymen who could not come to Decatur on a Sunday, owing to their clerical duties.

Imboden's Springs have been selected as the place for the exercises because it will afford ample space and shade for all who may wish to attend.

Ex-Gov. Oglesby has been invited and will speak on behalf of our citizens, and remarks will be made by several visiting clergymen.

DIED Suddenly. Mrs. Eliza Porter, aged 71 years, took violently sick Tuesday morning, at Maros, at 3 o'clock; medical skill did no good; she grew worse till 10:45 a. m., when she died. Her death was peaceful and resigned. She has a son living in Clinton, Ill., and a daughter in Nebraska. The deceased was keeping house for her brother, James Cone, of Maros. The funeral took place to-day, Thursday, at 3 p. m., at the M. E. church.

THE Keenan Funeral. The remains of the late William Keenan, as stated in last evening's REPUBLICAN, were taken yesterday afternoon to Monticello for burial. They were accompanied by the relatives, Rev. D. P. Bunn, and the following detachment from Dunham Post, No. 141, G. A. R., appointed by Post Commandant Steele: Capt. J. A. Barnes commanding, D. M. Berlin, J. E. Cretors, F. C. Yeager, George P. Nichols, J. C. Williams, B. B. Campbell, A. L. Brookway, M. B. Hall, P. R. Williams, Asa Brown, Joseph Ray, Henry D. Dunham and H. B. Westerfield. At Monticello the funeral party was met by a detachment of Monticello Post, No. 256, in command of Capt. C. H. Hubbard, commandant of the post. The procession formed and proceeded to the cemetery, where the body was interred with fitting military honors, Rev. Bunn officiating as post chaplain.

The visiting comrades speak in the highest terms of the manner in which they were received and entertained by Monticello Post, No. 256.

PERSONAL MENTION. J. W. Racco is home from an extended business and pleasure trip in the west.

Chas. C. Radcliff is on duty as book-keeper at Blenz & Delaney's meat market, west side old square.

Mrs. Dr. Walston and her daughter Anna have gone to Paris to visit relatives and friends for a few days.

Mrs. G. C. Hines left for Boston last night to visit her mother who is reported dangerously ill.

Rev. McBride has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church at Taylorville and removed to Raymond.

Rev. H. W. Trueblood officiated at the funeral of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Morris, and the remains were taken to Greenwood for interment.

Ed. Judson goes west this week in the interest of his firm, O. C. Platt & Co., grain commission merchants. He will make his headquarters at Marshall, Mo.

C. W. Pringle, of the Original Georgia minstrel party, is in the city for a few days. His show will commence the season at Batavia on August 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Thomas departed to-day for a visit to the northern summer resorts. They will visit points in Wisconsin and New York.

Last evening Supt. Charles White, of the Decatur mine, went to Pana to see about the shaft being sunk at that point.

Dr. S. C. Ham, of Argenta, visited Decatur yesterday, and dined with J. W. Ham and family.

Rev. Vosburg, the new pastor of the Baptist church, is making his home temporarily with Henry Smith and family and Thomas Hays and family. Rev. Vosburg will bring his family to Decatur from Chicago within ten days.

John C. Gault, late traffic manager of the Wabash, has closed out his affairs in St. Louis, and left that city for Chicago. It is said several eligible positions are open to him, but he has not decided which of them to accept.

Elder N. S. Haynes, state evangelist, describes Cairo as the town on stilts. He returned from that place this week. He says the air about Cairo is full of malaria, but the people of that town rise up on their tip-toes and swear it is the healthiest place in the state.

Litchfield Courier: "The Indian Medicine Man, J. I. Lighthall, after having pulled a few gallons of teeth from the mouths of our people; performed a number of surgical operations and sold a large number of bottles of Spanish oil, folded his tent like the Arab and silently stole away to Raymond."

The Temple of Music. You and all your friends are invited to call at Gustin's, on Merchant street, and examine those famous Chase, Emerson, Hallet & Davis and Kimball pianos, and the new styles of standard organs. Learn prices and terms. 1732

Members of the Brotherhood Step Out of the Telegraph Office.

In our telegraphic columns to-day will be found particulars of the threatened strike of the members of the Telegraph Brotherhood and why the organization was formed. To-day at 12 o'clock New York time (11 o'clock in Decatur) the Western Union company having refused to accede to the demands of the Brotherhood, the members of the organization throughout the company stepped down and out of all offices in which they were employed, hoping by this course to compel the company to recognize their claims, which are for increased and uniform pay, and for less hours of labor.

Few, if any, of the operators employed in Decatur are members of the Brotherhood, and they are all on duty at the up-town and depot offices. Members of the Brotherhood in Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Washington, Indianapolis, Springfield, Peoria, Bloomington and all the larger cities, have left their posts, and messages are being sent slowly by inexperienced operators and boys. Decatur has slow connection with Indianapolis, St. Louis and Peoria. In most of the small towns operators are on duty. It is stated that there are 17,000 operators in the country, and that 15,000 of this number are members of the Brotherhood. The strike will seriously demoralize business, and merchants will have to depend on the mail system solely for communication.

A Promotion.

Elder G. M. Goode, who has been pastor of the Christian church at Harriestown for five years, and has often preached in Decatur, has received a promotion. He goes to Normal, to take charge of the Christian church at that place, where Elder A. P. Cobb, son-in-law of Mr. A. Dennis of this city, has been stationed for some time. Elder Cobb has also been promoted. He goes from Normal to Des Moines, Iowa, where he will have a larger congregation and a more corpulent salary. The church at Harriestown will be without a pastor for some months. The vacancy will be supplied in due time. Elder Goode is an able preacher and we commend him to the people of Normal and vicinity.

OUT OF THE COUNTY. News Notes from Points Round About us Near and Far.
